Her name was Elaine, and she was no ordinary woman. She was the daughter of King Pellens, the guardian of the Holy Grail, and from her earliest days, she had been destined for a life of solitude and sacrifice.

Legend has it that Elaine possessed the gift of prophecy, and she foretold that the greatest knight in all the land, Sir Lancelot, would one day be her lover. But Lancelot's heart belonged to another - the beautiful Queen Guinevere, wife of King Arthur.

Despite the futility of her love, Elaine clung to the hope that Lancelot would one day return her affections. She spent her days wandering the forests surrounding Camelot, singing her plaintive song, her voice echoing through the ancient trees.

One fateful day, as Elaine sat by the shore of the lake, she saw Lancelot approaching. He had come to bid her farewell, for he was leaving Camelot to join King Arthur on his quest for the Holy Grail.

Elaine's heart shattered into a million pieces. She knew that this was the end of her hopes, and she vowed to sing her song until the end of her days, a constant reminder of her unrequited love.

And so, the Lady of the Last Song continued to sing, her voice carrying on the wind long after she was gone. Her song became a legend, a testament to the enduring power of love and the sacrifices we make for those we hold dear.
